She Was Progressing.

At the "Pageant of Progress" with her husband and another couple we reached the auto section. The men became interested. The other women and I became impatient, as walked on. Then I walked up to my husband. I turned around and beckoned for my friend to come back. In that second my husband must have moved to look at another car. Grabbing a man's arm I said: "What are you trying to do, make people think you are going to buy a car?" The man was not my husband.—Detroit News.

WEST PARIS

The farm buildings of Frank Farnum on High Street, about one-half mile from West Paris village, were totally destroyed by fire Friday afternoon.

The fire is said to have started from sparks from a burning chimney, which ignited hay in the barn through an open window. Mrs. Farnum had gone to the village to accompany two lady boarders to the train, and Mr. Farnum was working on the road near North Paris. The only persons at home were a young boy and Mrs. Watson, a boarder, who is an invalid. The house was large and in good repair, having been arranged for summer boarders, and the barn has been built in recent years. Much of the household furniture was saved. Miram Verrill occupied a small rent in the house. His wife and small baby were in Norway. They lost bedding, wearing apparel and some household articles. No live animals perished except a few hens, and the dog was so overcome by heat and smoke that he had to be killed. The amount of insurance is not known but it is said that it does not nearly cover the loss. The Farnum family have moved into the upstairs part in Mrs. Gertrude Verg's house, where Mrs. Farnum has her millinery display.

G. A. Smith returned last Wednesday from a two thousand mile auto trip through Canada and the Middle West.

Neptunite Varnish

Hangs On Like A Bulldog

It almost seems as if Neptunite Floor Varnish has teeth to it, the way it bites into a floor and holds on like a bulldog.

It hangs on and hangs on long after other varnishes have given up. You get wear out of it, simply because Lowe Brothers Varnish Experts put wear into it.

It gives your floor a rich gloss that stands water, soap or ammonia. Won't turn white.

Wooltex Coats

The New Fall and Winter Styles

Wooltex offers first of all a wonderful group of dressy coats. They follow the slender silhouette that the Parisian woman has already adopted as her own. Mostly, they are of the becoming wrap-around type, closing at the left side, and so, of course, much of the trimming is one-sided, silk stitching, cording, braiding insets of material. The materials in the coats are of the soft, deep piled type, so warm and luxurious.

WOOLTEX KNOCKABOUT COATS FOR ROUGH WEATHER
FOR MOTOR, FOR BUSINESS, FOR LONG WEAR

They offer a remarkable combination of mannish lines, outdoor fabrics and real feminine charm. If you are looking for smart styles, for beautiful fabrics and expert tailoring you make no mistake in purchasing a Wooltex. When you have a few spare moments come in and we shall be pleased to show you the new models.

Makes a Good Polish.

The following is said to be an excellent furniture polish, which may be made at home: One ounce of beeswax, one ounce of castile soap, one-half ounce of white wax, one gill of turpentine, one gill of boiling water. Shred the wax finely and dissolve it in the boiling water; mix them both at once, together, and beat until quite cold, when it will be of a creamy consistency.

LARGE PINES BECOME THE PREY OF THE BLISTER RUST. PROMPT ACTION IN CONTROL ADVISABLE

Dr. Percy Spaulding, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who studied blister rust conditions in Europe last year, has stated that "there is not the slightest doubt that the largest and oldest trees can be killed by the white-pine blister rust. The oldest white pine trees that I saw in Europe were in Switzerland. These were trees 118 years old with a diameter of 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 feet. These were killed or being killed by the blister rust. I doubt if larger white pine trees can be found in Europe, owing to the immense amount of large timber cut during the war. It is safe to say however, that the blister rust in Europe has killed the largest white pine trees that it has had a chance to attack, and there is not the slightest reason to expect that the much greater size of our western white pine and sugar pine in Idaho and California will protect them from the ravages of the disease."

The blister rust kills pines by girdling the bark, and thus preventing the flow of sap, which normally sustains life and promotes growth in the tree. After the bark is once penetrated the disease continues its growth until the tree dies. Small trees and limbs on large trees are killed within a few years, while a long period of time is required for the rust to kill the big trees. During the past several years, many unprotected pines in the Northeastern States containing young pines have suffered severe damage and in some cases the trees have been killed by the rust.

Recent reports show that the rust has been attacking merchantable timber, and inflicting serious damage to our largest pines. The writer has seen recently the infection area at Kittery Point, Maine. One white pine at this place was 14 inches in diameter, but short in its crown by 10 feet because of the attack of the rust. Other pines ranging from 11 to 15 inches in diameter and up to 30 feet in height show infection on branch and trunk, and are slowly dying from the blister rust.

At Brunswick, Maine, a large white pine 21 inches in diameter and 50 feet in height has 15 feet of its top killed by the disease. In this same locality are pines up to 26 inches in diameter and 100 feet high. These too would probably have been attacked by this time, had not the owner been wise enough several years ago to destroy the currants and gooseberries which spread the rust.

Large ornamental pines which are infected by the blister rust may be saved, if the disease has not progressed too far, by the removal of diseased branches or arcs, but this necessitates very careful work to find all of the infections, and a regular follow-up for a number of years, to insure freedom from the disease. In the forest, however, the removal of diseased branches from large trees is seldom practicable, on account of the cost, and here we must rely on prevention of infection in order to keep the pines healthy. This can be accomplished by the removal of all currants and gooseberries within 500 to 1000 feet of the trees. Where stands of merchantable pine have become infected, advice concerning their treatment should be secured from the County Blister Rust Agent, in care of the Farm Bureau, or from the State Forester.

Why You Should Think Before You Vote October 15 on the 48-Hour Law

On this day we either do or do not commit Maine to a law that makes it illegal for a woman to work more than 8-hours in any one day or more than 48-hours in any one week.
VOTE AGAINST IT FOR THE FOLLOWING REASONS:

1. It will tend to drive our factories and shoe-shops out of Maine. It will harass and complicate the Agricultural interests of Maine. It will interfere with continuous employment in every industry in the State. IT WILL DAMAGE MAINE.
2. Only two industrial states in the Union have any such law. Our cotton mills are moving to the South, where they can work SIXTY HOURS A WEEK.
3. IT WILL MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR MANY INDUSTRIES TO EMPLOY WOMEN AT ALL. Where there are certain seasons of RUSH WORK, as in shoe shops, in which women are largely employed, it is essential that women have the right to work extra time. They can not do so under this law. If they do so they are liable to punishment. They are certain to be displaced by men as they have in Massachusetts to so large an extent.
4. The present hour-of-labor laws are reasonable and work no hardship. THERE HAS NEVER BEEN ANY COMPLAINT ON THE PART OF WOMEN.
5. The passage of such a law for Maine is a DISCRIMINATION AGAINST MAINE INDUSTRIES, in favor of other states.
6. Any such law when passed should apply to ALL STATES ALIKE, not to a state whose industries are slipping and whose struggle in competition is weakened by distance from market; extra freight and shipment rates and cost of coal and materials.
7. WOMEN SHOULD HAVE AN EQUAL CHANCE WITH MEN TO EARN A LIVING. The foundation of the proposition to limit them and not limit men is weak; the proposal is unjust. "GIVE THE GODDESS OF LIBERTY A MAN'S CHANCE."

Vote Against This Discriminatory law

HELP WANTED IN BETHEL

And Furnished by the Help of Bethel People

Those who suffer with kidney back, or bladder disorder, want kidney help. Who can better advise than some Bethel resident, who has also suffered, but has had relief. Bethel people recommended Dean's Kidney Pills. Here's one case and there are many others.

W. H. Hall, farmer, Bethel, Me., says: "I have always received good satisfaction through the use of Dean's Kidney Pills and recommended them to anyone in need of a reliable kidney medicine. In my line of work, I have a good deal of stooping and straining work and it's hard on the back and kidneys. My back at times has ached as I couldn't keep on my feet and I had to go and sit down to rest. My kidneys were irregular. Whenever I feel any of these symptoms coming on, I go to Hennessey's Drug Store and get Dean's Kidney Pills. I use them until the trouble leaves."

"DEVIL'S GRIP"

Virginia, according to newspaper accounts, has been suffering from an epidemic which some of the victims have called "Devil's Grip." It was reported that there had been 1,000 cases of the disease in that state with three deaths from it in Richmond. From the office of the State Department of Health of Virginia, an inquiry was sent as to whether this disease with a new name was related to the well-known disease which goes under the name of influenza or grip. The reply which came was that it is not the same as influenza, but appears to be a definite entity.

A circular letter sent to the physicians in Virginia described the symptoms in brief as "Acute onset with severe epigastric pain which may extend to one or both sides of the lower portion of the thorax; the pain is very severe and is increased by deep breathing; so respiration is shallow and rapid, rate forty to sixty per minute; an expiratory grunt is frequently observed; there is often tenderness along the attachment of the diaphragm; temperature usually rises promptly and rapidly to 102° or 104°, pulse 80 to 160. Patient looks very ill; face is pinched or moderately cyanotic; about one-third of cases have nausea and vomiting; constipation is the rule; abdominal distention is usual with muscular rigidity. After four to twelve hours of severe pain and distress, the patient usually becomes more comfortable; occasionally the pain lasts twenty-four hours. Temperature declines as pain lessens. Some cases have a recurrence of symptoms with decreased severity after an interval of twenty-four hours or more. No deaths are directly traceable to this disease. Children are more frequently attacked than adults."

We were told that an account of the work on this condition up to the 15th of August would be published in the Journal of the American Medical Association for September 1. Physicians may find an account of this unusual epidemic disease on Page 746 of that issue of that Journal.

Just So.

HI-POWER GASOLINE

Do you remember the gasoline you used to buy—way back in 1910 or '11? You will probably remember the price at any rate—30 cents or so at the filling stations. And 10 cents for a different kind of gasoline than you usually buy today at three or more times that price. Those were the days when gasoline would test anywhere from 63° Be. to 70°, with an end-point or dry-point about 350°F.

Today what do we find? A disinterested report of tests of gasoline sold in the different cities of America in July, 1920, showed that the average dry-point of gasoline marketed in Pittsburgh was 431°, covering a range between 392°F. and 518°F. For the entire country the average was 450°F. Such high end-point gasolines are directly responsible for the largest part of the troubles with the automobile engine, and it is a recognized fact, proved by the researches of various Government bureaus and other foremost automotive engineers, that such gasolines make practically impossible further increase in the efficiency of the automotive engine.

An eminent engineer, speaking before the American Petroleum Institute, declared that it is very doubtful whether any portion of a portion fuel having a distillation temperature above 400°F. is of value in an automobile engine in general use. To illustrate his point, he compared the higher fractions of gasoline to cinders in coal, which give no heat, and by clogging the furnace prevent good coal from doing its work efficiently. The comparison is well made because the higher fractions cannot be broken up in the present-day carburetor. These fractions enter the manifold in liquid form, despite such precautionary means as jacketed carburetors and special manifolds, hotspots, etc., and affect the proper distribution of the gas to the cylinders.

Condensation follows. Incomplete combustion takes place. The oil in the crank case is diluted by the higher fractions which find their way past the piston rings. The power output, the efficiency, the life of the motor, all are vitally affected. Such gasolines, especially in cold weather, are largely responsible for (1) difficulty in starting, (2) heavy carbon deposits, (3) sluggish action, (4) knocking, (5) dilution of motor oil and bearing trouble.

Gasoline, however satisfactory in the motor car of today, would be useless in the cars of a decade ago, and would be most unsatisfactory in modern high-compression aviation engines. For this reason, the desirable specifications of gasoline for general automotive use cannot be started, but the principal essential properties of gasoline can be enumerated:

- (1) Highly volatile products should not be present in such excess that evaporation loss or danger in handling and storage is excessive; but in sufficient quantity to insure starting the engine under reasonably favorable conditions without preheating the fuel.
- (2) Non-volatile constituents or fractions boiling above 400°F. should not be present, for reasons previously stated.
- (3) The gasoline should be free from all non-combustible material and be neutral in action, i. e., free from acids used in its manufacture, or any foreign material, such as water, that may attack the metal, or after combustion form carbonaceous deposits in the cylinder.
- (4) The gasoline should be free from rank or disagreeable odors, and water-white in color.

Valentine Red Star Gasoline, a Pennsylvania desolized straight run product of 60° Be. gravity and 264°F. end point, and it is safely under the 4000 limit previously referred to. These every drop of it is utilized in the combustion chamber. Better starting, greater power and economy, and minimum dilution of the motor oil in the crank case are the results of its use. Compare it over a month's time, or even a day, with the 65-60° average all blended gasolines so frequently sold, and you will find it really does make a difference.

Without a good motor oil, it is folly to use a good gasoline, or vice versa, as one bad product will offset the advantages of the other. Valentine Motor Oil is manufactured from Pennsylvania crude oil—the crude which has no equal. They are the result of over thirty years' refining experience, the finished product of up to the minute refining equipment. From every standpoint we are fully equipped to turn out automotive oils which are unsurpassed, and we have been doing so for years. Valentine has a reputation for high quality. It is acknowledged to be one of the leaders—and one that can always be depended upon.
